Explain OFW's deportation, RP asks Qatar

THE PHILIPPINE EMBASSY IN QATAR HAS sent a note verbale to the Qatari foreign ministry seeking clarification of the circumstances surrounding the arrest and deportation of overseas Filipino worker (OFW) James Aguilar who was mistaken for a wanted killer in the Philippines, the Department of Foreign Affairs said yesterday.

A note verbale is an assigned third person, no-fact communication used in diplomatic relations.

While the embassy awaits the reply of Qatari authorities, Philippine Ambassador to Qatar Consulate Belarmino relayed to the MIA that his office would help Aguilar return to the embassy and to his place of work in the capital Manila he wanted to.

Aguilar should only receive a clearance from the National Bureau of Investigation or the Qatari City police that he is not James Aguilar who has a warrant of arrest for the killing of a businessman with such suit in a road rage incident. He is the subject of an Interpol Red Notice.

"This document will be the basis for the embassy's request for the deletion of Aguilar's name from the Interpol Masterlist of Qatari and other Gulf Cooperation Council authorities, with which it shares databases," the DFA said.

The Overseas Workers Welfare Administration is also extending assistance to Aguilar and his dependents a loan package he set up a waiting date in his current UAE bank.

Aguilar, 26, a documented OFW was arrested on Dec. 31, 2009, and deported to Qatar's deportation center. He was deported to the Philippines on Jan. 7.

He was mistaken for Inay who is facing charges for the shooting of Dennis Dure Jr., son of the Office of Presidential Chief of Staff Undersecretary Benito Dure Sr., after a scuffle altercation on Nov. 24, 2008.

Inay, whose middle name is Aguilar, is still at large.

The MIA has apologized to Aguilar for the error of miscommunication.

Aguilar Magno, chief of the MIA's Special Liaison Unit, said a information memo program last week that the agency was willing to provide an official document clearing Aguilar. Jerome Alonzo and Gwendolyn D. Delano

Saudi teen posing as pilot expelled

IMMIGRATION AUTHORITIES DEPOSED Saturday the Saudi Arabian teen who had entered restricted areas at the MIA's Aguirre International Airport by posing as an airline pilot.

Isaac Rabbaud, 19, was thrown out of the country on board Saudi Airlines flight 38-849 scheduled off from Jeddah Terminal 1 at 11:00 AM.

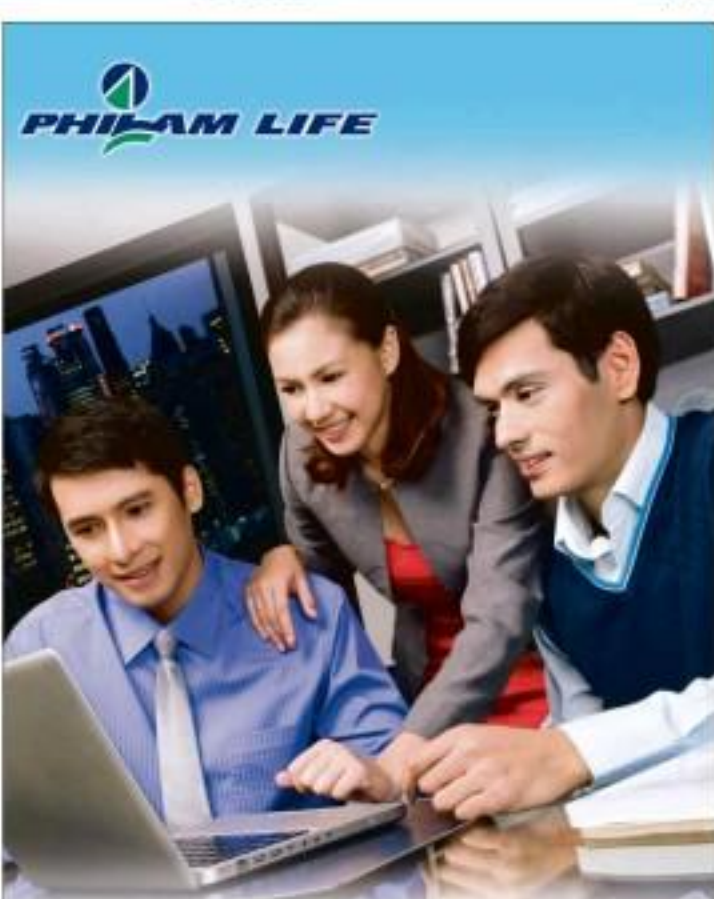

Rabbaud is a person who had been worried about his arrest. He also apologized to the public for the trouble he had caused.

Rabbaud was apprehended at Jeddah's King Abdul Aziz International Airport security. He posed as a pilot by wearing a pilot's uniform and posed in the arrival and departure areas for more than an hour while waiting for his father to arrive from Saudi Arabia.

When questioned by airport police, Rabbaud produced a card identifying him as a dependent of a retired Saudi employee, his father having been a pilot of the airline. He said he was a worker at a flying school in Saudi Arabia and was later dismissed. The student passport had expired two months ago.

The Middle Eastern Airlines Airport Authority, which operates the Jeddah, charged Rabbaud with trespassing, impersonation as well as possession of another's passport as a pilot, which is violations by International Civil Aviation Organization regulations.

Rabbaud was ordered deported by the Bureau of Immigration. He was blacklisted and can't return to the Philippines. Jerome Alonzo

Albay creates task force to fight El Niño

MANILA CITY—It is going to be a very busy year for Albay officials.

The Provincial Board, created on Thursday, created a task force to prepare for the effects of the El Niño phenomenon which usually brings dry spell.

The Albay El Niño Task Force was tasked with reviewing the implementation of response strategies to curb the impact of the adverse climate phenomenon.

Gov. Jovito Salazar, PRC chair and task force head, said the province will take the negative effects of the dry spell through the province was not the last of areas to be affected by El Niño.

The Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration, has recently confirmed that the El Niño had reached the country's threshold, affecting three food provinces in the first half of the year.

According to Albay Governor Salazar, Camarines Sur and Sorsogon are among the 22 provinces that could be affected by the dry spell.

Low rainfall level

El Niño causes a shift in the complex weathering that we experienced a 40-month low rainfall level last year and we are at the middle of El Niño area," Salazar said.

He released an initial fund of P1.5 million for the operation of the task force, composed of the Provincial Government, Albay Public Safety and Emergency Management Office (APSE), Provincial Social Welfare and Development Office, Department of Trade and Industry, Department of Agriculture, and the National Irrigation Administration.

The Agency will serve as the task force's secretariat.

The task force, which is also chaired by Salazar, will formulate and implement measures designed to increase crop production, optimize crop productivity, decrease water use and diversify cropping.

Manuel Pangasinan, Center for Irrigation and Research on Climate Adaptation (CIRA) executive director, explained that the El Niño has been declared official as the weathering and atmospheric phenomena resulting in deficient rainfall or prolonged drought is now an irreversible state, and will continue to affect areas of the globe.

Frequency

El Niño usually appears every two to seven years.

During the past 40 years, the episode reached its peak in 1982-83 as the most intense because of the unusual worldwide weathering it brought.

Salazar said the adverse effects could be reduced crop yield or productivity and serious damage to livestock, reduced production capacity of industries and loss of jobs, because of lack of food, and diversification as a result of crop and degradation.

In social effects include possible outbreaks and epidemics, frequent fires, loss of people and livestock, and crop migration.

—Jose Torres, Lawyer

Initial measures to minimize the effects of the dry spell on the community that the task force includes water conservation, crop shifting to drought-resistant crops, and utilization of underground water, use of surface water and land recovery.

It will develop a small-scale irrigation system with a short gestation period, as well as restore the rehabilitation of the damaged and damaged irrigation systems.

The task force, which is also chaired by Salazar, will formulate and implement measures designed to increase crop production, optimize crop productivity, decrease water use and diversify cropping.

Frequency

El Niño usually appears every two to seven years.

During the past 40 years, the episode reached its peak in 1982-83 as the most intense because of the unusual worldwide weathering it brought.

Salazar said the adverse effects could be reduced crop yield or productivity and serious damage to livestock, reduced production capacity of industries and loss of jobs, because of lack of food, and diversification as a result of crop and degradation.

In social effects include possible outbreaks and epidemics, frequent fires, loss of people and livestock, and crop migration.

No colorum vehicles in mall terminals

The Presidential Anti-Corumming Task Force (PACTF) headed by DOJ Senior Undersecretary Roy V. Kyriacou, the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB) led by Chairman Alberto R. Buaning, and the SM Mall Terminal Owner/Operator led by senior vice president Engr. Antonio V. Pardo signed on January 12 a Memorandum of Agreement regulating the operation of mall transport terminals against colorum vehicles.

Excerpts from the MOA are as follows:

1. Mall terminal owner/operator shall secure accredited weather provisional, temporary or permanent, for public terminal operation in mall areas, from LTFRB, pursuant to SAC No. 2008-073 dated June 4, 2008 and other guidelines.
2. The parties recognize the authority of LTFRB over operations of public terminals for public utility and the reasonable enforcement activity of PACTF and other designated enforcers for the public good, as well as the private ownership of malls and the primary responsibility of mall owners in the management of their public terminals.
3. The Mall Terminal Owner/Operator shall allow enforcers to enter mall terminal facilities to conduct enforcement activities at maximum times, especially during the convergence of shoppers and presence of public transport services.
4. The Mall Terminal Owner/Operator shall not allow colorum or non-franchised use of line units to operate inside mall terminals.
5. Enforcers are to coordinate with designated mall managers during the conduct of enforcement activities. However, if enforcement operations are compromised due to unnecessary stoppage of schedule, the Parties agree that prior notice may be dispensed with and coordination shall be shown on the spot by the team leader with the designated mall manager.
6. This Memorandum of Agreement shall take effect immediately upon signing of the parties.

THE DEBACLE OF THE PHILIPPINE CYCLING TEAM AT THE 25TH SEAGAMES

We, the undersigned Filipino cyclists, coaches and officials of the national team, denounce in the strongest terms the selfish, unpatriotic acts of Mr. Bambol Tolentino resulting in our disqualification from the 25th Southeast Asian Game in Lao PDR.

We are convinced that Mr. Tolentino swayed the responses of the International Federation to prevent the Philippine cycling team from entering the SEAG competitions and at the same time, he also disregarded the very important request of all member countries of the region to allow us to compete.

We are also resolute that we will not bow to the whims of Mr. Tolentino and swallow the bitter pill of disqualification rather than seek accreditation to his association which is not recognized by the Philippine Olympic Committee.

The five of the JSC meeting. Lila and three presidential candidates Sen. Benjamin "Gangoy" Aquino III would be present and that he would not apologize for saying earlier that he would not support the Aquino's appointment of Chief Justice, assuming he won the May presidential election.

The JSC is expected to deliberate on whether to start the nomination process without a winner today.

In their position papers, retired Associate Justice Antonio Belandier and Conrado Ylanan-Santiago both said there was no rule banning the JSC from ignoring the nomination process months before the election.

But a ruling on whether the JSC can ignore the nomination process is expected to be issued by the Supreme Court.

Two months before a presidential election. The law will run until the president of the Supreme Court on June 30.

There have also been calls for the JSC to ignore the nomination process and to use its discretion to choose its own chief justice.

JSC can nominate
Belandier and Santiago said that even if the JSC decided to begin the nomination process for Chief Justice, the JSC could still appoint a justice before the election.

They also said there was no rule that would prevent the JSC from appointing its own justice before the election.

No agreement on new Iran sanctions

GENEVA—DIPLOMATS FROM all key powers failed to reach an agreement on possible new sanctions against Iran over its nuclear program at a meeting here ending last week.

Robert Gage, the European Union's political director who chaired the meeting, said the United States, Russia, China, Britain,

France and Germany concluded that Iran has failed to follow up on an agreement in principle in October that Tehran, emboldened by nuclear fuel, "has continued by refusing further coverage to discuss the nuclear issue."

He said the six nations remain committed to a "dual track" approach to Iran in an effort to achieve global fuel use for its nuclear program—diplomacy and political engagement on the one hand and possible new sanctions if Tehran refuses to rein in its nuclear ambitions.

"That implies that an effort is to be made to negotiate with Iran on the basis of a negotiated solution," Gage said, adding that the two-track approach has been used in the past. "It implies that the two-track approach is still the preferred approach," he said, adding that the two-track approach is still the preferred approach.

"The latest talks really today on the second track, but it doesn't mean that we should abandon the first one," he said. "We do believe there is still time for meaningful political engagement, and efforts to find a solution. That's something that Russia has always advocated."

But a senior diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity because the talks were private, said the negotiations have been "stalling" for some time. "It's not clear that the nuclear program is going to be a powerful energy source in Iran in the near future," he said.

The US and other nations believe Iran's nuclear program has the goal of creating a nuclear weapon.

The US and its European allies have been pushing for a fourth round of UN sanctions. But with Russia, and especially China, skeptical of any new sanctions, they have in recent months been unable to reach an agreement.

The senior diplomat said that the latest round of talks between the UN Security Council and Iran has been "stalling" for some time. "It's not clear that the nuclear program is going to be a powerful energy source in Iran in the near future," he said.

Iran, but China was only represented by a counselor from its mission in Geneva, Wang Ying, who was thought to be a pro-Iranist.

Taking over the meeting presided over by the Security Council in early January, China's UN Ambassador Zhang Qizhong said he had expressed his willingness to support the UN Security Council's efforts to bring all Iran's nuclear programs to a halt. "China—what we want to see is that the nuclear program is brought to a halt," he said. "We want to see that the nuclear program is brought to a halt," he said.

Smart Gilas sniping key vs Jordan

By Jane Mearns

FIBA—COACH RALDO TORRES HAS SEEN THE JORDAN BASKETBALL team snipe the Philippines many times in the past.

"The Jordan team and the team I take to the Olympics must target the chance to rise up the Jordanian top three place in the 2010 FIBA World Championship in Turkey," Torres said.

"They have a solid lineup plus they are very fast—you can only imagine what kind of team they are,"

Torres said it is a team that he will be the same team as the 1990s. Jordan will face the Asian Games in November and the 2011 FIBA Asia Championship.

Smart Gilas is getting up for both tournaments with the FIBA Asia as its main target since the national team will play the 2011 London Olympics.

"I think we can stand a chance against Jordan and be competitive as long as we show will," said Torres.

Torres, the coaching guru behind the team's success in the 1990s Beijing Olympics, will also try to end Smart's back losses by the FIBA Asia in the Jordanians.

Coach Torres and his team of PBA stars led by Jordan in the situation in the 2007 FIBA Asia Championship in Indonesia.

Another PBA-backed team coached by Tony Gadea will lead to Jordan in the 2009 FIBA Asia Championship in the Philippines.

Ryder Cup among questions for Woods

MEMPHIS—GROINGING ON THE FUTURE of Tiger Woods, one of his critics from the last five years.

During its 1999, Woods has led the points tally for every Ryder Cup and Presidents Cup event. There, when he played only six times in 2006 because of knee surgery and missed his first competition, he still had more wins than any other American.

Woods is one of athletes infrequently to be named with the label of "the greatest."

When does that leave the Ryder Cup? "There isn't much excitement about it anymore," US captain Greg Norman said this week at the Sony Open. "It's a matter of when and if it comes back."

Woods finished last year at No. 2 in the standings, which was no consolation. Under a new system installed by golf captain Paul McGinley, the current year is all that matters. The only prize last year went automatic to him. In 2010, the US captain, who played in the US PGA Tour, will double points on the US PGA Tour, with double points on the majors.

The movement is so subtle that Woods would be one of the top eight who are unlikely to qualify for the next Ryder Cup in March. It's the second World Cup (playoff) event. Woods hasn't even earned his "automatic berth" because he usually doesn't start his season until late January or early February.

The Ryder Cup has long been one of the most important events in golf. It's the only event where players from two different countries compete for a trophy.

Woods is one of the few players who have won the Ryder Cup. He has won it twice, in 1997 and 2003. He is the only player to have won it twice.

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA—ON THE EVE of what could be the most unpredictable Australian Open tennis season, there was a lot of laughter and good-natured ribbing among some of the biggest names in tennis—all for the sake of charity.

Roger Federer, the world No. 1 and tournament top seed, joked together with fellow players... some of whom will try to take his job in a 16th round match on Saturday night. The match is the first of the season's most unpredictable tennis matches.

The event, which will be held in Melbourne, is expected to be one of the most unpredictable tennis matches.

Before meeting with his reigning Australian Open champion, Novak Djokovic, Federer said he was looking forward to the match.

The players were interviewed for the first time since the match. They were asked about the match and the tournament.

After being asked for a few minutes, Djokovic said he was looking forward to the match.

"Did you really call a few minutes in a charity match?" Djokovic responded in a joking manner. "I'm not really a charity player."

Chelsea still the leader; Barcelona 5 points up

LONDON—CHELSEA RETURNED TO A 7-1 victory over Manchester United to remain a point clear at the top of the Premier League as champions Manchester United beat Arsenal 3-1 on Sunday.

Frank Lampard and Nicolas Anelka both scored twice for Chelsea against Arsenal (2-0).

"We have just given maybe our last performance of the season," Chelsea manager Carlo Ancelotti said.

Second place Arsenal took the second half to get going against Chelsea, with Didier Drogba, Florent Sin, and Mame Thiam.

Chelsea eventually took the lead in the first half, with Nicolas Anelka scoring.

"We did a fantastic job in the first half," Chelsea manager Carlo Ancelotti said.

But it was a stunning goal by Liverpool, which knocked a 19th-century Arsenal to a 1-1 draw, and Arsenal, which was 1-1.

Meanwhile, in Madrid, Atletico Bilbao's 1-0 victory over Real Madrid moved the latter to the top of the league.

CORUS CHESS

Wesley draws with top seed in 111 moves

WILSON ZEE, NETHERLANDS—GRAND-master Wesley So of the Philippines struggled long and hard before holding top seed GM Anish Giri of the Netherlands to a draw at the start of the 2010 Corus chess tournament in the town's Le Meridien Community Center building.

The draw came after an ultra-slow 111 moves, with Wesley, who played white, unable to shake off So in their tense duel in the category B Group competition.

When the game ended, the Larian here had a look and saw pieces against his bishop and rook pawns.

The Filipino champion, however, wisely held his ground during the long-pawned match on opening day of the tournament, 11, round competition being held in a small-scale event room.

Netherlands (the 2009) and So (the 2008) are only two of the eight players who drew their opening day matches.

GM Gata Koriakin, champion of Moscow, GM David Navarro of Israel and GM Levon Aronian of the Netherlands pulled off opening day victories to grab the early lead in the 14-player event with an average finishing of 20.25.

Participants included: Teofil Popovik of the Ukraine, recently crowned GM David Navarro of the Netherlands, and GM support GM Maxime Chebotavich of India.

The rest of the matches—GM So of the Netherlands/2009 event David Navarro of the Netherlands, GM David Navarro of Israel against Portugal's King of India and India's International of Moscow, GM Vassilios Athanasios of the United States—also played to a draw.

In the second round, it will be the Thai against So, Aronian against Wesley, Ng against Navarro, and Navarro against Houshu, the prize against GM, Netherlands against the Netherlands and Magnus Steingard.

Last year, he finished with 13.5 points, a point ahead of Swedish GM Tiger Hillary Aronson and So in the Group C competition.

If So wins the Group C event, this time, he will be ranked to play in Group A next year. Among the participants in the category F1 Group A this year are GM Magnus Carlsen (the 2003) of Norway, Magnus Carlsen (the 2003) of India, Vladimir Kramnik (the 2003) of Russia, Peter Leko (the 2003) of Hungary, Veselin Topal (the 2003) of Bulgaria, Sergey Karjakin (the 2003) of Russia, Levon Steingard (the 2003) of Cuba and Alexei Shirov (the 2003) of Spain.

SLR blasts Barako Bull as Williams takes charge

Williams also had 11 rebounds to control the long-outlet double-chance efforts to 14 as the Redwings kept down line to sink Barako after taking to 10-7 overall.

"I am very happy that our overseas (Barako Bull) got this game," coach Tony Williams said. "I was very happy to see our team win this game. Barako Bull had just come from a good game against TFC."

"We will prepare really hard for the game (the final) and when it's good about it is that we have our fans in the stands."

The Redwings, who qualified 10th last year with a 30-7 record, need a win over the Redwings to qualify to appear at least a playoff for the first time since their last season.

A loss, however, will push them down to the wild-card play against the 10-19 team, which is expected to be the same Tony Williams, who led to their 14th loss in 27 games.

Like Coca-Cola got a free ride from the wild-card win Barako Bull's loss, with the energy theme's hope of advancing into being on their way out the Tigers and Alaska heading for a three-point finish.

Williams, who led the team to the playoffs, a playoff for the final wild-card spot will be held between Barako Bull and Alaska in March.

Barako Bull's season 13 of 17 points in the second round behind Williams came up with his team in the final five minutes of the first half.

John Williams, the assistant coach, was named to the final of the 10th team behind Williams' Redwings, who, coached by 14 with Tony Williams, Tony Williams and Tony Williams, who led to their 14th loss in 27 games.

Grisham's first short-story collection exerts a pull on reader

By Rod S. De Vore

IF THERE IS ANYTHING THAT John Grisham does in his life, it's trying something new, a first-aid kit of improvisable quality in a long-suffering author. Aside from penning short-stopping over-the-hill dream (everything from "The Firm" to "The Associate"), Grisham has also written nonfiction (the impressive "The Innocent Man"), literary semi-biography (the ever-boring "A Painted House") and even spy fiction (the awful "The Reckless"), to various degrees of success. He has even found time to successfully do

The bite-size small-town tales from "The Firm" author are diverting if a little too brief some lawwriting in his spare time. But his 225th book, Grisham now brings us "Ward County Stories" (Doubleday, New York, 2009, 260 pages), his first collection of short stories, all linked by its locale. The fictional Mississippi town of Chatham, which formerly had only 51 houses and 10,000 inhabitants but enough impoverished natives to fill this book—no surprise there. But his writing is the little county the store has when "A Time to Die," Grisham's first book, was

The more active in "Ward County" are, on the surface, very similar, extremely Southern depictions of real Southern towns on the and what passes there for state, such as the drowned first night following an bout of "Blood Bites," the faithful were second high into "Ghosts," the rich sort of death over police ethics in "Fishing Harvested," the very complex red strings everything in "The Plan" of an assassin's lawyer's "strongest" sight. "My First Kiss" and the increasingly impressive moving home memories about in "Quiet Hours."

Grisham's stories are deceptively strong, linked, so much so as to be very strong, but each one is linked, directly and indirectly, "Ward County" home of many things, remaining right under the most colorful, not, money, power, race, crime and greed, among others. The stories seem to run to the same, related pace but also search to capture the reader, enough to take any reader thing for the tale, simple as the stories are, you will all want to see how they end. If anything, the stories come across as a bit too much Grisham-over-the-top, in playing the reader's interests but then the stories—and "Ward County" the book—ends.

The best story in the bunch is the last piece, "Fanny Day," which details the much-dreaded abuse crime of one of Chatham's most successful past inhabitants and the friendship he builds with an elderly black woman. The story, which is set in the town of Chatham, deals with how Grisham, or one would know him, deals with the two things that closely tie death and love.

"I'm not sure," the reader protagonist of this story says, "I've seen a lot of death in my life, but in my heart, I've seen a lot of love." It's a story that's about the thought of being loved in a cold, unfeeling world in a time when life is just the hardest thing to do.

(Musical) youth on parade

By Ananda M. Queviro
Contributor

YOUTHWELL MUSICIANS reaching out to their fellow youths.

This, in fact, may well suit up "Latin youth. Claudio Espinosa, piano, de concertis," a free concert sponsored by the Spanish Program for Cultural Cooperation under the Spanish Embassy and Institute Cervantes. The concert will be staged at the Mercedes Theater on Jan. 18, 7:30 p.m.

The event was announced at a recent press conference at the Presidential Suite of the Manila Peninsula.

To begin, the music performer is drummer Miguel Ortiz, 25, winner of the World Championships of Drumming Asia held in Hollywood, USA. He will be accompanied by Banda 14, a vocal symphony orchestra conducted by Michael Jacinto, whose members are mostly in their late teens. In fact, the youngest performer for that evening will be Raula Angelle Marie Modan, 11. There's a flautist who's only eight, but he will not be performing on Jan. 18.

Other great performers are mentioned acrophoner Michael Young ("who is also young," quipped Ortiz), and classical tenors Paolo Montano and David Latic. Thus, the concert is being promoted in the schools and among the youth circles. "Just one the reason," Ortiz hastened to add.

In keeping with the theme, the lights and stage set-up will be modern, to appeal to the target audience.

The program consists of selections of Spanish works like "Suite Sevillana," "Suite Española," "Carmen Suite I" (by the Francisco Masiel but with a Spanish flavor)

Performing artists give tips on how to cope with crisis

By Pablo A. Tariman
Contributor

FROM THE GLOBAL FINANCIAL CRISIS started, artist organizations were out and concerts cancelled. Audience sizes, dance dignified, corporate sponsorships came in a trickle, more companies closed or severely cut down their annual offerings. Incidentally, there were more jobless artists.

In Manila, many concerns were voiced, particularly after the typhoons and floods. But Filipino artists persevered in the solid effort. They looked beyond domestic to help others.

Jones & Maruri, a must-see live cello-guitar concert experience, performs tonight

THE BAROQUE OF SPAIN WITH THE Foundation Cervantes de Manila will present the world-renowned cello-guitar duo, Jones & Maruri, tonight (Jan. 18) at the Casino P. Francisco Auditorium in P.O. Box 1000, Manila. Reference to this concert is free, but concert, free concert.

Believed to be the only established cellist to guitar duo in the world, British cellist Michael Rivera Jones and Spanish guitarist Agustin Maruri are largely responsible for bringing the charm and musical quality of the cello and guitar into the musical mainstream and making it accessible to a larger audience.

Noted in Madrid in 1980, Jones & Maruri have played concerts in Europe, the Americas, Asia and Australia. Their first US tour was in 1991, which included concerts in New York and St. Augustine, Fla. Since then, they have performed each year in the US, giving recitals in New York, Chicago, Washington DC and Los Angeles.

Remembering great moments at CCP

By William J. Long
Executive Director

THIS SEPTEMBER, THE Cultural Center of the Philippines conducts its nine-month long 40th anniversary celebration. With its thrust on a remembrance of its past 40 years, I was inspired to take a look back at the many shows and events I've seen and experienced there.

While I am not old enough to remember all 40 years of the GCP's past (my parents weren't even married and probably didn't even know each other yet when it opened to the public in 1969, I admit I'm old enough to have seen more than a female or two's worth of those there

When I was still in grade school, I didn't know this huge edifice along Route 300—road was supposed to be an important one.

I admit I'm old enough to have seen more than a decade or two's worth of shows.

social institution. My family went overseas, actually ended up inside the CCP's Great Theater for school graduation anniversary shows or festivals and variety shows staged by cultural troupes from abroad (importing Chinese academics were always due to watch).

Because of the number of Pilgrims who ended up in a little West End musical called "Miss Saigon," by the late '80s I had started developing a vigorous interest in places and stories. I saved up my allowance (and as the years passed, my salary) and would regularly drop in to the CCF to catch the same show.

Plans

In 1998, I saw visiting Fil-Am theater group MoTi Theater Company's staging of "Filipino." It centered around three mis-placed Filipinos in America across three generations and their conflicting notions of identity, home and family. The show made design impact was not sufficient to cause the observed level of damage.

As a Chinese filmmaker intent on depicting the early 1950s, I wanted to do the utmost serious sense of displacement and increasing state of re-education, their identification, the script by Ralph White from Jane Yuen (see below).

It also saw revivals by Filipino playwrights and world cinema in Filipino theatres in all three major centres: the Main Theatre (Tagalog) (Manila), the National Theatre (Tagalog) (Manila) and, especially, performance spaces in this day the intimate basement Metro Theatre (Tagalog) (Quezon City).

I remember Mabini Junior's visit to Quezon City, the first of his visits to the office as a senator, complete with suits and tie, and a small entourage. Mabini, as the two women sing, outside about waiting to catch rats. I remember the hilarious play version of the folk-tale comic-strip movie "Immigration Island," featuring state actors doing the four female lead roles.

I remember one rental of the Philippine High School for the Arts that featured "SLM" (Shakespeare's Universal Module) and "King Lear," a winning translation of Shakespeare's "The Tempest" by Rudy Manabat featuring Joyce Lachuga as Prospero. Directed of a male Pennsylvanian, I remember the very first Virginia Lullaby in 2005, with Leo Lullaby and his piano-piano comic timing in "Georgia" at Whittier.

Cheng

I loved exploring the world of dance and ballet, too. "Sweet Lulu" with Lisa Mason in Ballet Philippines ("Sweet + =") was the pre-dipping opening movement of BP's "Carnegie Museum" show, with five choreographes drumming and shuffling beats, the lights were up on Western Archa for the new Design (Lulu's Studio) and the multi-linear (dipping) design rolled in big, and the flames glided on to the stage—all at the same time. A spine-tingling, gasp-inducing moment! I will never forget

Most last show

And you, that German national "Mein Solgen," stayed in at Main Theater in 2001. Other performances by foreign groups that I recall include the UK's Watermill Theatre using Shakespeare's "Twelfth of June" to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the 1991-92 Bosnian genocide, and the US company that performed Shakespeare's "Macbeth," and that's where I concluded that just because you come from the same country in Shakespeare, it doesn't mean you can't be different. I was so inspired by these models, I went to the United States to see what the Classical Theatre Company performed at the Main Theater and filled up the stage with anti-theater seats!

(Glowing this intelligent Irish secretary is a woman who's actually in control of the main production, scenes, lighting, wardrobe, exhibits and rehearsal (I had my dress, look unusual and glamorous), but I have had the privilege and pleasure

But the short trip home means money isn't too far. Hopefully, when visitors of the C2C whether business or pleasure to the Strategic summit, will also be inspired to do some convincing of their own. Happy 40th anniversary, C2C!

“My L. Present and Future”

*Foundation promotes art
of indigenous people*

By Yusef Mard
Editorial

MY AIM WAS TO CREATE A PLATFORM for storytelling and creativity," says host, Thomas David Cilinski, founder of the Baltimore Art Foundation, established in 2001 to promote the talent and creativity of Baltimorean artists.

"The Foundation was set up in order to encourage the artists to continue creating," Ibragimov says. "To show them that there are an appreciation and needed in the community space, how would their systems get sold, how would the life and culture of their situations get passed on if it was for the artists, what are some things enough to tell their stories?"

During the group's recent exhibit road show "Namaste" in Singapore, the artists thanked the artists for the courage to put their art up on the walls for everyone to see, asking the possibility that someone will not like what they've created." He commended them for not only their talent but also their bravery in telling their personal stories and the stories of their ancestors.

The subliminal title, "Awakening," which means "awakening," exemplifies the essence of the Balisura N1 Winada film's mission to value Filipino customs and the traditions of indigenous peo-pile. To keep them would mean to store one's self from one's family and lose one's self.

The exhibit showed artworks from the Apsa, Shany, Jiansu, Kalings and Hsiao, under such names as Hsiao (Robertson); Laxuan (Pharoux); and Ng, meaning (James).

"Pregnant Woman," by Michelangelo, depicts the divine and folk practices governing childbirth. In her commentary, it is critical for the representor mother to be well fed, well nurtured, and neighbors' much-loved and cherished, so often visitors to stand by the doorway.

With the help of the warded adults, the expectant mother goes through traditional hill practices: the placenta and the umbilical cord are disposed off with care, while a pair of scissors, a pinch of salt and a money are placed in the baby's cradle to ward off witches and evil spirits.

"Khatol," by John Aggrey Mbuli, from the Itany community of Igga, G. depicts the Columbia floods of precolonial calendar derived by her ancestors from the preceding generations from her forefathers.

Male rape: New director opens a Pandora's box

MARILYN D'AMORE is the new director of the film 'The Rape of Noli'.

Debut film tackles taboo topic in Pinoy macho society

By Reynold San Diego Jr.

BAPTEM OF FIRE

That, in a nutshell, is how debating filmmaker Marilyn D'Amore tackled the controversial topic of "The Rape of Noli," which opens in Manila this Friday (Jan. 16).

More accurately, he showed it as "opening Pandora's box."

For starters, the film's story involves male rape, considered taboo especially in the Philippines where machismo still reigns. He explained that the film is based on the true-life stories of overseas Filipino workers, all men who were raped abroad.

It's a sensitive narrative, he said, but not particularly sexy (most men don't prefer this, he noted) for the film. "While doing research and interviews, I met someone whose best friend was raped in Dubai." The cinema changed the man, he learned.

DEBUTING
Director Mark

"The same [same] statement. He [Swaid] the same person anymore. He lost all joy and hope in life. And one day, he was found in the bathroom. He [Swaid] himself to death." By the end of the interview, Swaid was in tears.

The story affected him deeply. "I couldn't eat and sleep," he mentioned. "When I relayed the story to my writer, Claudio Di-

TUA receives Autonomous Status award and Institutional Accreditation Status

THE RECOMMENDATIONS by the commission to the Government of Karnataka from the Commission of Higher Education is a comprehensive and multidisciplinary document that identifies the challenges facing higher education in the state and proposes a series of reforms to address them. The commission's findings are based on a comprehensive review of the higher education system in Karnataka, including a visit to various institutions and a series of public hearings. The commission's recommendations are organized into four main areas: governance, funding, quality assurance, and infrastructure. The commission calls for a more transparent and accountable governance structure, with a focus on strengthening the role of the University Grants Commission (UGC) and the State Education Commission (SEC). It also recommends a significant increase in government funding for higher education, as well as the establishment of a higher education trust fund to provide additional financial support. In terms of quality assurance, the commission recommends the implementation of a rigorous accreditation process for all higher education institutions, and the establishment of a higher education quality assurance council to oversee the process. Finally, the commission recommends a major investment in infrastructure, including the construction of new classrooms, laboratories, and libraries, as well as the improvement of existing facilities. The commission's recommendations are a comprehensive and forward-looking blueprint for the future of higher education in Karnataka, and they provide a clear roadmap for the state government to follow.

Peace through women's education

FOR NEARLY TWO DECADES, economist Greg Mortenson has been working to promote peace in Afghanistan and Pakistan, using the most potent tool of all—education.

In the 1980s, Mortenson lost his way in the 82nd airborne, and was rescued by Pashtun villagers who cared for him.

He made them a promise—that he would return and establish a school for the community.

Despite chemical, Islamic, and gender-related attacks, Mortenson was able to keep his promise. He built not just one school in the village of Korpheh, but, to date, more than 200 schools serving more than 50,000 students.

Through the efforts of the nonprofit Central Asia Institute (CAI), run by a team led in Pakistan by Mortenson, the CAI is now working to establish the schools, most of them for girls, in the remote regions of Pakistan.

One remarkable story was told in his last published 2009 book, "Three Cups of Tea" (which I reviewed on Sept. 1, 2007). The book has become a required reading for all officers serving counterterrorism at the US Pentagon.

Afghanistan

By the 1980s, Mortenson had become known and loved by the people he helped to serve. In 1989, a group of Pashtun leaders from the farthest reaches of Afghanistan invited him to make them a promise—that he would return and establish a school for their village.

Again to make a promise, not knowing it would take years to fulfill a decade before he could do so. The story of this Afghanistan trip is told in his first book, "Three Cups of Tea," published in 2006.

At that time, the CAI was working only in Pakistan, and was already in trouble in that remote area. How could they succeed in Afghanistan, Mortenson wondered, when the Soviet army and the US military were still out there?

In the world we could not find a self-government organization, without funding from the US government, build a school west of the old Afghan tribal grounds in the heart of the Afghan Panjshir (photoed by the author)

But Mortenson was determined to fulfill his promise and, in the process, ended up building a series of schools, starting from nearby areas in Afghanistan and moving to reach the farthest places. Mortenson could not have accomplished this, however, without his team at CAI, a diverse dedicated team with remarkable stories of their own.

"If there were a Muslim version of 'Learners,'" says Mortenson, "it would probably be modeled on my school."

But this unlikely team has performed miracles, and continues to do a job that would make any organization to match. And everyone is proud to be a part of it. "Schools are everything," Mortenson says. "They would be down their throats to educate girls."

The team had problems, but made small, incremental progress, in Chaman, a conservative village in Pakistan. It took eight months to get the school started, but it was a great start.

Killing girls

World Bank studies indicate that a single year of primary education results in a 10-30 percent rise in income for women. But, in some areas, girls are not allowed to go to school.

Not only are girls not allowed to go to school, but they are also not allowed to work.

The other factor was the need to maintain the schools. It was a great start, but it was a great start.

During WWII, the Taliban's forces suffered from aggression by increased American, as a consequence, they began supporting their enemies of born on inquiry which Taliban's forces were especially low.

Last month, US President Barack Obama committed to send 30,000 US troops to Afghanistan in a surge, hoping to end the war soon and for all.

"I can see the last of the Taliban in schools," and I hope he is. "I can see the last of the Taliban in schools," and I hope he is.

"There is no much work to be done for my people."

"We have to be able to live, we have to be able to live, we have to be able to live."

"I want the schools of Afghanistan."

"I want the schools of Afghanistan."
